Historical Background : Ancient Civilization in the Region

- Indus civilization, also called Indus Valley civilization or Harappa civilization, is the earliest known urban culture of the Indian subcontinent. The nuclear dates of the civilization appear to be about 2500–1700, the southern sites may have lasted later into the 2nd millennium BCE.
- The Indus cities are noted for their urban planning, a technical and political process concerned with the use of land and the design of the urban environment. They are also noted for their baked brick houses, elaborate drainage systems, water supply systems, and nonresidential buildings.

Historical Background : Ancient Civilization in the Region

- Mohenjo-Daro is widely recognized as one of the most important early cities of South Asia and the Indus Civilization and yet most publications rarely provide more than a cursory overview of this important site's.
- Geography. The Indus River Valley civilization was located in a small area of land in Pakistan and India. Aside from being on the banks of the large Indus River, the Indus Valley civilization was surrounded by forests, deserts, and oceans, making it a very fertile land.

Historical Background : Ancient Civilization in the Region

- The Indus Valley Civilization is now often compared with the far more famous cultures of Egypt and Mesopotamia, but this is a fairly recent development. The discovery of Harappa in 1829 CE was the first indication that any such civilization existed in India, and by that time, Egyptian symbols had been broken, Egyptian and Mesopotamian sites dug out, and script would soon be translated by the scholar George Smith (1840-1876 CE). Archaeological dig out of the Indus Valley Civilization, therefore, had a significantly late start comparatively, and it is now thought that many of the accomplishments and "firsts" attributed to Egypt and Mesopotamia may belong to the people of the Indus Valley Civilization.

The Decline of the Indus Civilization

- Many scholars believe that the collapse of the Indus Valley Civilization was caused by climate change. Some experts believe the drying of the Sara Swati River, which began around 1900 BCE, was the main cause of climate change, while others conclude that a great flood struck the area. Around 2500 BCE, civilization in the Indus River Valley began to decline as people migrated eastward to the Himalayan foothills. Here, they shifted from a civilization composed of large cities to one of the mostly small farming villages. By 1800 BCE, most Harappa cities were almost completely immoderate.
